Pongal, the harvest festival of Tamil Nadu, is one of the most cherished celebrations in India. Marking the season of abundance and gratitude, this festival offers a wonderful opportunity to unite students and faculty members in the spirit of joy, tradition, and togetherness. A special area is set up where students and teachers gather around earthen pots to cook the traditional sweet Pongal.

This act is symbolic of gratitude towards nature and a prayer for prosperity. The sight of milk boiling over the pot, accompanied by the chant of "Pongalo Pongal," fills everyone with joy.

THE FREQUENT SHIFTING OF STUDENTS FROM ONE SCHOOL TO ANOTHER DUE TO HASTY PARENTAL DECISIONS

Today, I want to shed light on an issue that is becoming increasingly common yet deeply concerning—the frequent shifting of students from one school to another due to hasty parental decisions, often based on superficial or temporary concerns.

Every child's education is a journey, not a race. Consistency in learning environments, peer interactions, and mentorship plays a crucial role in a child's emotional and academic development. When parents frequently change schools for their children—often citing reasons that could have been resolved through proper communication and patience—it disrupts this journey.

CONSTANT SCHOOL CHANGES CAN LEAD TO:

- 1. Emotional Instability – Children struggle to build long-term friendships and a sense of belonging.
- 2. Academic Setbacks – Different schools follow varied teaching methods, syllabi, and evaluation systems, making it hard for students to maintain steady progress.
- 3. Lack of Confidence – Adjusting to new environments repeatedly can make children anxious, withdrawn, and less confident in their abilities.

4. Missed Opportunities – Long-term participation in co-curricular activities, leadership programs, and teacher mentorship is lost when transitions happen too often.

Instead of making impulsive decisions, parents should:

- Communicate openly with teachers and school authorities about their concerns.
- Consider the long-term impact of school changes rather than focusing on short-term inconveniences.
- Provide emotional support and stability to help children thrive where they are.

Let us remember—education is not just about academics; it's about growth, relationships, and stability. Let's work together to ensure our children get the best by making decisions that truly serve their future.
